CLINTIE.

BY J. H. KLLIOT.

While the snow in many a gerge is left, Unfull their petals in some sheltered cleft, And give the young year their glad affering,

We lay them on our bosoms, fresh and bright.
And drink their subtle fragance with a smil
And never do we stop to think the while
That every hour they're fading from our sight Till some clear morning, in the pearly dew, We search for them and find that they are gon And even then we heed not summer's dawn Nor think that, with the spring, they left us, t So this flower blossomed in the sheltered cleft.
Of our dear home. We leved it watched it well.
Saw it anfold with joy we cannot tell.
And never dreamed that we might be bereft.

We laid it on our bosoms tenderly, Where sunshine only upon it might fall; We twined our hearts about it, gave it all Our fervent love—all our idelatry.

One morning it was gone; and then we knew That, with the summer-dawn of its young life Its mission here was done; too frail for strife, We felt that still in Heaven it lived and grew. But we are weak and searcely can believe That we shall never see our darling more— That on the bright sands of a far-off shore and Albert Weber's He grows to perfect beauty while we grieve.

And so we listen for the sweet young voice, And think we hold his little hand in ours, And see his red cheek flush mong the flowe. And for a moment our sad hearts rejoice. To catch the witching light of his rare smile, And twine our fingers in his soft dark hair, And lay them on his forehead, white and fail Watching the shadows in his eyes the white:

And oh! 'tis hard to feel that nevermore.

He has been convicted, on the strongest authority, of having publicly declared in the spring of 1861, that if these States are to be separated be hoped Peansylvania would go with the South, which was there about to take arms to break down the government.

The strongest authority of having publicly declared in the spring of 1861, that if these States are to be separated be hoped Peansylvania, is a more with the day of his esponsals. Brother, will you be among those who shall go forth to meet the king when he cometh with "Hosanna, blessed is he that cometh in the narrow of the Lord?" Humbly, feebly, but still earneably can you say, "Christ is my all; He is all I desire on earth; He is all I need for Heaven."—

If so, long for His appearing, for you shall see

Sec. of State of Foreign Affairs:

My Lonn:—in a dispatch from the Secretary of State of the Confederate States of America, dated the 4th of August last, and now just received. I am instructed to consider the mission which brought me to Enland as at an end, and I am directed to withdraw at once from this country.

country.

The reasons for terminating this mission are set forth in an extract from the dispatch which I have the honor to communicate herewith:

"The President believes that the Government there is a large spring of excellent water. Its tonic properties must be powerful.
